This act was amended by another act on the 28th of March, 1873, increasing the capital stock to five millions of dollars and authorizing, as before, all or any part of said capital stock to consist of lands; all of which were to be exempt from taxation until the road should be in a condition to pay 8 per cent dividends out of its net revenues.

The act does not compel the building of the road, nor does it provide for any torfeiture of its charter on account of failure to commence building it. It merely provides that "said subscription shall be made in good faith within two years after lands are subscribed they become at once free from taxation.

Now what was the intention in passing was it to simply exempt certain large parthe West Virginia Legislature, from taxation. The idea of a railroad to start from Steer Creek, in Calhoun county, to rue through Gilmer county, and to ter minate on Elk River, in Braxton county, eral's life that smacks of martydom that ooks suspicious on its face, and indicates we ever heard of. the possibility of a "job" underneath it and Mr. Scorr, in the speech referred to. very broadly intimates that two prominent Democratic leaders, in the West Virginia

We find in the last number of the lands from taxation.

What makes the project especially sus picious looking is the fact that two years atter the first charter passed, and without one mile of the road having been built an amendment was put through the Legslature increasing the capital stock to $5,000,000, and making the increase, as before, to consist in whole or part of these thereof as may be subscribed by speculaexempt from taxation, State and county, thereby entailing in years to come thousands of dollars of additional taxes upon Virginia. Five million dollars' worth of opportive exempted from taxation in this masher is a great public calamity, and the scheme is one that may be followed up by other similar acts of incorporation, until millions more of property may be exempted in the same manner. The disastrous end of such legislation is very plain: It must tend to destroy values throughout the State by reason of the impositions it will by upon them. Acts of incorporation that make no provision for carrying out their alleged objects, and and would vote for the maintenance of the targent meanwhile exempted for the screen and would vote for the maintenance of the targent meanwhile exempted by the results of the target objects, and that grant meanwhile exempted by the results of the target objects, and the grant meanwhile exemption from taxino, should be treated as fraude upon the revenues, and should be treated as fraude upon the revenues, and should be treated as fraude upon the Legislature to pass a repealing act.

We suppose the News does not refer to the good old days of Judge Thompson's charge and Horace GREELRY's indictent in West Virginia, but to that brief period during the war when certain perons were debarred from screeching in the streets for JEFF DAVIS. Exciting Contest.

St. Paul, October 9.—There has been great interest and excitement to-day be-tween the friends of Senator Ramsey and Governor Davis, both of whom are can-didates for United States Senate, and both of whom reside in this city. At our primary elections of the Republican party both contestants brought out their full force with the result that the Ramsey men carried the city and county.

Mr. Farrington, of New Jersey, declard that at the convention held at Baltimore the secret sessions had been of so unsatisfactory a character that he had resolved never to give his sanction at the least for that body to go into a secret session again. The question was still under discussion when the hour for taking recess arrived. After recess the guests from England and Canada were ushered into the charal and took un their perities.

Edgiand and Canada were ushered into the chapel and took up their position on the platform. They were received by the delegates to the convention, who rose to their feet on their entrance. They were introduced separately by President Craik, and each delivered brief addresses. The first per-
